The Jamieson Family

Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, 1904; (pages 457 - 458)

"The Jamiesons are Scotch-Irish, who originally came from Scotland, and the family name can be traced to the times of Wallace and Bruce. During the years they lived in Ireland they took an active and loyal part in the various wars and troubles that raged between the opposing forces, being consistent and earnest supporters of the Orange cause and the Hanoverian succession. Needless to say, the family in Ireland and Canada have been active members of the Loyal Orange Institution.

"The first one in the family to come to this part of the country was James Jamieson, who came from Ireland about two years before the cholera epidemic, [1832, ed.] He settled at Picton and became a leading citizen, being quite successful and prominent in trade, burning lime on a very large scale. He is best known, perhaps, as having founded the first Orange Lodge in Picton.

"His father, Robert Jamieson, came to Canada with his family about two years later. He was a large powerful man, six feet four inches high, and as strong and heavy in proportion. Having a brave disposition and of good heart, he volunteered to nurse the cholera patients, the disease having broken out on shipboard. He seemed immune while on the vessel, but, strange to say, contracted the disease shortly after landing, and died at Kingston.

"John Jamieson accompanied his parents and his brothers, Robert, William, Hugh, Edward and Joseph to Canada. A sister, Margaret, remained in Ireland. She married a Mr. Redford, who was a well-to-do silk weaver in the vicinity of Bristol.

"John Jamieson learned the trade of tanning, and he was first associated with Miller's tannery in Picton; subsequently he was in business for some years at Sherbrooke, Quebec. He next returned to Picton, and engaged in ship carpentry but for some years before his death he settled upon a farm where he died at the age of forty-four. He was nearly as large as his father, being six feet two inches in height and weighing two hundred and thirty pounds. He married Elizabeth Skuse, of Randon City, County of Cork, Ireland. Their children are shown in the table annexed.

"W.J. Jamieson is a blacksmith by trade and carried on a business with A.W. Hepburn and also with Fralick Bros, ironing carriages, ships and boats. He served for six years as Chief of Police of the town of Picton, and for the past three years has been successfully carrying on a grocery business; not only serving the people of the town, but having a waggon continually on the road buying and selling goods and produce. For some years past he has been a member of the Council and takes a keen and intelligent interest in public affairs. He is fond of all manly sports and holds a silver medal, won at Deseronto, at the time of the Queen's Jubilee [1897, Ed.], where he took the part of anchor in the famous tug-of-war, which lasted for two hours and thirteen minutes. He also possesses other medals and prizes for excellence in different sports, including a prize for throwing the fifty-six pound hammer and other feats of strength. He is a leading Orangeman and has gone through all the degrees of the Orange Institution, up to and including the Black Order of the L.O.L he has been Master, County Director, County Master and Treasurer for Boulter's L.O.L, 488. He has been equally interested in the A.F. and A.M. and the I.O.O.F."
