Generation One

The McFaul Families

Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte

"The McFaul families of Prince Edward County are respectively descended from Daniel and Peter McFaul. They were sons of Robert McFaul, who came, with his family, from Dutchess County and settled at Colborne, He died at this place and but little is known as to many of his descendants. We know there were at least six sons, to-wit, John, Cornelius, Robert, Jacob, Daniel and Peter, and a daughter, Christina.

"Concerning Jacob McFaul an interesting and romantic story has been handed down by tradition. It was in Dutchess County, N.Y., that the prospect of a dance attracted Jacob and his sweetheart to spend the evening. Everything went merry as a marriage bell, or as the sleigh bells which were jingling on their homeward journey, when the sleigh in which they were riding upset, and Jacob and his fiancée were thrown violently to the ground. The young woman received injuries from which she soon died. It was the occasion of much sympathy in the neighborhood for the families of each, and especially for the bereaved lover, a nine days talk and then all was over - except for Jacob, who soon afterwards disappeared from the neighborhood and was never seen nor heard of for nearly forty years.

"Daniel McFaul, when a mere child, made his way into Prince Edward County. He lived for some years with a farmer named Carman, and at the end of his term received a horse and saddle and a small amount in money. Mr. Carman's place was within a half mile of Wellington and about two miles from this, Daniel purchased land at twenty-five cents and acre. He soon built himself a log cabin, and having married Hannah Cunningham began to forge his way towards competence and prosperity.

"The Pioneer was in the War of 1812 as a defender of his adopted country. Along with a man names Amey he did great work of the heaviest kind, in removing ordinance from Kingston to Toronto. They had charge of two teams of horses attached to heavy built sleighs. While engaged in this arduous work he saw much that was stirring and lived in his memory. He used to speak of one occasion, after an engagement at Niagara, having seen prisoners captured there on the march from Niagara to Halifax. The route was by way of Toronto and Kingston, and the Pioneer assisted numbers of these prisoners by giving them lifts on his sleigh.

"At the conclusion of the war, in 1814, Daniel returned to his farm where his wife, during his two years of absence in the service of his country, had faithfully cared for everything. She lived to bear him seven sons and five daughters. When she lay dying and hardly able to speak she yet managed to articulate with difficulty the following words to one of her daughters; one of her grandchildren also being present, took it down in writing. The note is in the possession of Haskel McFaul and reads as follows:

"Hallowell, November 6, 1852.

" Don't leave me on my back, for it strangles me. Don't bury me the second day, but wait the third or fourth day, for I hate to see folk put their friends so soon out of sight. I want to be buried in Stinson's graveyard, and James Haight to preach my funeral sermon. I don't feel afraid to die. I am prepared for death. I hope you will tray and be steady and take care of your father, for he is old, and childish, and feeble. I want you and Samantha to sing a hymn to pass away the time."

" A few years later Daniel died. It is interesting to note that Daniel Powell, a son of the pioneer's daughter, Sarah, was the discoverer of the gold mine on Richard's old farm near Madoc.

"Peter McFaul, a brother of Daniel, arrived in Canada from Dutchess County, N.Y., about the year 1812, at or about which time Daniel had joined his compatriots in the War of Defence. The first heard of him in Canada was making an endeavor to locate himself in the township of Hallowell, but without much success. He had made the experiment of settling too far back in the township, in the portion of which, at that time, was composed of the densest forest. This holding which he possessed and had partly cleared and, in some small part, cultivated, in the backwoods of Hallowell, he exchanged fora farm more conveniently situated, but still in the same township.

"The Pioneer and his son Daniel served in the Rebellion of 1837. They were drafted to Kingston, and it was during their stay there, that the historic "wind-mill" hanging occurred. The ill-starred rebellion was soon over, and they returned to Hallowell.

"Peter McFaul married three times; first, Phoebe Cunningham; second, Sarah Mastin, and third, Hannah Wessels. He had eleven children in all; eight by his first wife and three by his third. Two of his sons came to fill important positions in the community; Daniel was Reeve of Hallowell for a considerable length of time, and Arnoldi was Warden of the county and also Justice of the Peace for a number of years."

Note that there was also a staunch Roman Catholic, Archibald MCFAUL who lived in Wellington, and owned "Tara Hall". As far as can be determined, at this time, he is not directly related to the McFaul family that originated in Dutchess County, New York.
