

Generation One

1. Stephen Young #152420, b. 1778 in Manchester, Vermont, USA,¹ d. 1849 in Carrying Place, Prince Edward County, Ontario,¹ buried in Carrying Place Cemetery, Carrying Place, Prince Edward County, Ontario.¹

Arrived at Weller's Bay, Carrying Place about 1802, He and his half-brother Asa WELLER were the first settlers there. Lived on Lots 6,7, 1st Concession, Murray Township.

Stephen Young Family (Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, 1904, pages 41 - 50)

"Stephen Young with his half-brother, Asa Weller, came to the Carrying Place about 1802; they being the first settlers at Weller's Bay. He was born at Manchester, Vermont, in 1778, and died in 1849. He married Lucy Marsh. Daughter of the old Sydney (sic) pioneer, Mathias Marsh. Both are buried in the Carrying Place Cemetery.

"He had that handiness and ingenuity, which is so often found among the people of New England; for although he had never apprenticed to any trade, he appears to have accomplished everything he attempted in a mechanical line. He, like all the early settlers, had to become his own carpenter, cooper, blacksmith, tailor, shoemaker, etc. He made shoes for his family from leather of his own tanning, shod his oxen in winter, with iron shoes of his own manufacture, and made ox-yokes and other useful articles, of winter evenings, by the light of a blazing fire. He was fortunate in having for a wife, a woman who was fully equal to the occasion; she crowded the work of an ordinary lifetime into the first few years of their married life. It is a well authenticated fact, that she, in one day, cut out and made by hand a pair of full cloth trousers for each of her seven boys. While amply endowed with force and energy, she was not deficient in the more gracious gifts of womanhood. Her hospitality was unbounded. The travelling missionary ever found in her home a generous welcome; while by the same fireside a hungry Indian would gratefully receive his food and shelter.

"In the first years their principal food was cornmeal with buckwheat pancakes, fish and flesh of wild game. Plums, cranberries and other small fruit grew abundantly, as did hickory nuts, butter-nuts and the like. The plentiful supply of nuts would have made it easy to raise pigs, but for the first few years they found it impossible to keep and swine, on account of the bears and other wild beasts that infested the neighborhood. Mr. Young selected the farm (lots 6 and 7, 1st concession, Murray) upon which he lived and died, because of an excellent stream, abundantly fed by springs, which guaranteed an abundance of water with a fall that indicated power that could be speedily utilized by his mechanical ability. He did, at an early day, build a dam and construct a saw-mill; bravely rebuilding, when his first plant, just completed, was swept away by a violent storm. Although a primitive affair, with no steel except the saw itself, it served the purpose of the sturdy pioneer and enabled him to carry on the lumber business, and to manufacture masts, for which he receives as much as twenty pounds apiece. The flour mills of Mrs. C.O, Simpson stand upon the old saw mill site, at the present time. Although twice burned, the mill was each time rebuilt; a quantity of lumber was logged down the Bay at a fair profit, and the water power was also used to grind grain for neighbors far distant from the grist mills then in the country.

"The settlers had but little live stock; indeed, wild animals were far more abundant. The following traditions in the Young family give us an interesting picture of some happenings incident to pioneer life.

"One day Mr. Young's eight or ten yoke of cattle were pasturing in a field adjoining the house, and while the family were at dinner, it was learned that there was an unusual commotion among the oxen; they were all bellowing and moving toward a central point. For a few moments the cause was unknown, but it soon developed that their objective point was a calf which was being carried off by a large black bear. A gun was procured as quickly as possible, but by this time the oxen had formed a circle around the bear and compelled him to release the calf, which did not appear to be any the worse off for its hugging. In the confusion the bear slipped into the adjoining forest.

"It was about this time that one of the cows ceased, for weeks, to give a reasonable amount of milk at the evening milkings; a mystery solved one evening by her returning home with a fawn at her side, to which she had evidently been acting the part of foster mother.

"Mr. and Mrs. Young were religious and educated people. Their children were carefully instructed by their mother in the rudiments of English education, and their home for years was the place chosen for services occasionally held by the devoted missionaries, who visited this region. The same conscience and intelligence was manifested by Stephen Young in political affairs. He contended for representative government, for separation of church and state, and for many of the reforms that followed the Rebellion of '37. So highly did he value political integrity, that upon one occasion he returned on foot from the polling place at Cobourg rather than accept the hospitality of a neighbor, whom he suspected of selling his vote.

"He massed a large estate, giving to each of his sons a fine farm, when he reached the age of twenty-one.

"He and his faithful wife died about the same time, and are resting side by side.

"William, the third son of Stephen and Lucy Young, joined the ranks of pioneer Methodist preachers. The mission or circuit over which he travelled at various times, covered almost every territory from Prescott on the East to what is now Brampton on the West. During his early work he was one of the very few in the ministry who had been born and brought up in this province, and was therefore more inured to new-settlement hardship than were the majority of his equally zealous co-workers. He was quite at home in following an Indian trail, a settler's line of blazed trees, in paddling a birch bark canoe, or in fording a river.

"Ministerial duties, particularly during the early years of Mr. Young's itinerary, were very different from what they are at the present time. So great was the scarcity of ministers, that, in his regular work, he seldom preached to the same congregation oftener than once in four to six weeks. A charge or circuit, fifty miles from one extreme to the other, was not considered of unreasonable size. Churches were few, so that many of the services were held in one of the largest houses of each settlement. Nearly all of the older inhabitants, were, or had formerly been, members of some evangelical church, and in consequence of their long isolation, gladly laid aside all doctrinal differences, and worshipped in unison, the common Saviour.

"Rev. Young was a lover of peace, but not of "peace at any price." Like all ministers of the Gospel he frequently prayed that the good Lord the for time when swords would be beaten into ploughshares and spears into pruning hooks. Nevertheless, in 1866, he was wonderfully pleased to learn that five of his sons had presented themselves at the rallying point of the several military companies to which they belonged, and announced their readiness to be sent against the Fenians.

"He died at Trenton, aged eighty-two, and was borne to his grave by his seven sons who had gathered from various parts, to receive another and a last blessing from their worthy sire.

"Of his children who attained maturity, Catherine Lucy Young married James Landerkin, a brother of the late Senator Landerkin. [George Landerkin, 1839 - 1903, son of James Landerkin from Nova Scotia; Ed.] She and her husband lived for many years on the old Landerkin homestead, in the township of Tecumseh, which is still in the possession of the family; they ar now enjoying a well-earned rest in the village of Bradford. James Benjamin Young still remains near where his ancestors settled one hundred years ago. In his early manhood he attended Victoria College, taught school for several years, and for some years was engaged in mercantile and fruit business. He has frequently held important public positions in his native town. For the past fifteen years (he) has been Clerk of the Division Court and agent for various financial institutions.

"R. Edgerton Young, is so well known as a missionary, author, lecturer and traveller, that it may be superfluous to dwell upon his career. After a very creditable course at the Normal School, Toronto, he taught school for a few years. He then entered the ministry of the Methodist Church, and, in accordance with the usage of that church, was stationed at various points. He was near Thorold at the time of the Fenian raid, and upon that memorable Sunday he neglected his preaching but put a bible in one pocket and a pistol in the other, and went to the front as quickly as possible. The fighting was about over when he arrived, but he assisted in rounding up some of the stragglers who were afterwards executed. He still has a rifle which one of the Fenians threw behind a fence in his flight. In 1867, while he was a pastor at Hamilton, the Church called for volunteers for missionary work in the North-West; - some for the new settlements then in their infancy, and others for the Indian work. Mr. Young, after consulting his newly married wife, offered to go for the Indian work. In a travelling party of missionaries to the North-West, was the well-known Rev. dr. George Young, whose heroic endeavors to save the life of Thomas Scott is well-known to every reader of Canadian history.

"Rev. Young's domicile was the Norway House, about four hundred miles distant from the nearest settlement. During ten years he traversed the entire country by canoe or dog train in every direction for hundreds of miles. His parishioners were principally of the Cree and Salteaux tribes. After the Red River Rebellion, it was learned that Riel and Lepine had counted upon the assistance of these tribes, and had sent emissaries among them to stir up disaffection. The loyalty of these children of the forest was considered unquestionable, but their visitors, with plausible stories of real and imaginary grievances, had produced a very wide-spread uneasiness amongst them. Mr. Young made it his business to collect together as many as possible of the chiefs and leading men of each band and explained the whole matter to them. His advice, coupled with that of the Indians who had embraced Christianity, induced hundreds of braves to refrain from the warpath. After the Rebellion, Lord Dufferin, then Governor-General of Canada, personally complimented and thanked Mr. Young for his assistance. He is a well know author, with publishers at Toronto, New York and London.

"Rev. William Young, after attending Victoria University for some years and teaching school for a short time, entered the Methodist ministry. He has the reputation of being very successful in his various charges, and has frequently been elected to positions of honor in the Conference to which he belongs, such as Secretary of Conference, Chairman of Districts, etc. He is at present stationed at Newtonville.

"Rev Charles Stephen Young, like several of his brothers, for a time taught school, but subsequently became a Congregational minister. He is at present engaged in the ministry. George S. Young was for several years a commercial traveller. He went into mercantile business in the town of Brockville, which he successfully continued for several years. He died in the prime of life, universally esteemed and respected. He had served for a number of years as Alderman.

"Samuel S. Young, now a resident of Toronto, was for years a leading wholesale merchant of Newton. He was deservedly popular and was repeatedly chosen to serve upon the Council and the Board of education. Two of the finest buildings in Trenton recall to his former townsmen his public spirit and commercial success.

"Stephen Young, Jr., fifth son of the pioneer, Stephen Young, lived and died upon the farm, about two miles west of Trenton, which had been given to him by his father when a young man. Before the burdens of age affected him, he was a very active man, being instinctively progressive in all of his ideas. He was always ready to assist in any laudable undertaking that he thought would be beneficial to the community. He built the first brick house in Trenton, still in a good state of preservation. When Trenton, then an unincorporated village, was part of the township of Murray, he was in the township council for several years, and was reckoned an authority on municipal matters. He was a ready speaker, and in political meetings held the attention of his audience, not only by the weight of his arguments, but often by his telling sarcasm and ready wit.

"Of his descendants, special mention should be made of his grandson, Stephen J. Young, B.A., Barrister, son of Benjamin Young. He has been a practicing barrister at Trenton for many years, and also United States Consul. He has been a member of the town council, and has occupied other important positions. He has always taken an active interest in the political questions of the day, and once unsuccessfully contested West Hastings, in the Liberal interest, for the Dominion Parliament. He has constantly in hand important business, which he has always conducted to the full satisfaction of his clients. Universally esteemed and respected, he adores his profession and shed lustre upon the community in which he lives."
